*I told the physical and occupational therapists that I didn't want to be babied—I want to be challenged.
They did just that and, in most cases, I met the challenge.”*

When 67-year-old William Rowell needed outpatient rehabilitation therapy after getting his right knee replaced, he was given three options: a facility his wife had used previously; a place he wasn't familiar with at all; and Tabitha.

For the Lincoln resident, the answer was Tabitha.

It wasn't William's first time receiving therapy from Tabitha's rehabilitation experts—or the first time he had a knee replaced. But it was his first time using Tabitha's outpatient program.

Following his left knee replacement in March 2021 and surgery to repair his crushed right ankle in September 2020, William completed his short-stay, in-patient rehabilitation at Tabitha. He went through Veteran's Affairs for his outpatient rehabilitation following both.

But now William was looking for a customized therapy approach that would help him meet his goals: to walk without using a cane or walker when all was said and done; to be able to take care of himself without assistance while tending to his daily personal needs; and to be back to cycling again.

It was the conversations he had with Tabitha's therapists during his inpatient therapy that convinced William that Tabitha was the best place to help him meet his goals. He asked questions—What would be different from inpatient versus outpatient rehabilitation? What kind of exercises would be a challenge?—and he liked the answers he got.

His outpatient program would follow the same plan as his inpatient work and as he progressed, he would be given different exercises to accomplish.

“That's exactly what they did. They were constantly challenging me, and that's what impressed me the most,” William said. “It didn't matter which therapist it was, they would have different exercises for me to do. I have a whole memory bank of different routines now.”

After completing his outpatient rehabilitation, William met each of his goals. He's fully independent, and he walks up and down the steps smoothly, with a full range of motion.

And the avid cyclist is back on his bike again.
